Entrepreneurs invited to learn about information resources

Champaign, Ill. — Save time by learning where to look for information to help you in your entrepreneurial venture. Between your local library, the Internet, and colleagues, the array of information resources can be overwhelming. Judith Cone will offer insights on some of the best information sources for entrepreneurs on April 22, 2002, at 6:30 p.m. Cone is director of entworld.org, an online resource that acts as a central repository for essential information for small business owners and individuals considering new ventures. She is also a director at the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation, a Kansas City, Missouri-based foundation that focuses its resources on entrepreneurship and youth development. Cone will be joined by Rebecca Smith, head of the UIUC Commerce Library, and Fernando Elichirigoity, assistant professor at the UIUC Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences on a panel that will answer questions on information sources for entrepreneurs. Smith and Elichirigoity will be able to provide detailed information on University of Illinois resources available to entrepreneurs.

The panel will be held on April 22 in 370 Wohlers Hall, 1206 South Sixth Street, Champaign. This seminar is part of a series of presentations focusing on entrepreneurship sponsored by the Center for Enterprise Development, an office that provides professional consulting and business research assistance to regional businesses including current and potential occupants of the University of Illinois Research Park and Incubator and faculty and students at the university. Students from the Illinois MBA Program provide the CED consulting services.

The lecture is free and open to the public. Free parking for the seminar is available in the university lot west of Sixth Street across from Wohlers Hall. Attendees are requested to RSVP to CED@cba.uiuc.edu by the morning of April 22.
